7 Spiritual Habits Every Catholic Can Build
(even when life is overwhelming)

You know you should be praying more. You know the rosary is good for you. You know the saints didn't become holy by accident. And yet — here you are, another week gone by, and the spiritual life you want still feels like something that happens to other people.

You're not lazy. You're not a bad Catholic. You just don't have a system. And without spiritual habits—daily, repeatable practices rooted in the faith—even the best intentions dissolve by Tuesday afternoon.

The good news? The Church has been building spiritual habits for two thousand years. You don't need to invent anything. You just need to start small, stay consistent, and let grace do the heavy lifting.

Here are seven spiritual habits that Catholics have used for centuries to grow closer to God—and how to actually build them into your life, even when life is overwhelming.

1. Morning Offering: Start the day before it starts you. The morning offering is one of the simplest and most powerful spiritual habits you can build. Before your feet hit the floor, before the emails and the noise—you give the day to God.

"O Jesus, through the Immaculate Heart of Mary, I offer You my prayers, works, joys, and sufferings of this day, for all the intentions of Your Sacred Heart."

— Traditional Morning Offering

It takes thirty seconds. But those thirty seconds reframe everything that follows. The commute becomes an offering. The difficult conversation becomes a sacrifice. The boring meeting becomes a chance to practice patience.

How to Build This Habit

- Set a single alarm labeled "Morning Offering" before you check your phone
- Keep the prayer on a card by your bed or on your lock screen
- Don't aim for a long, eloquent prayer. Aim for consistent. Even "Jesus, this day is Yours" counts.

PARISH LINK

Connecting Parishioners. Strengthening Businesses. Supporting Our Parish.

Who We Are

Parish Link is the business networking ministry of St. Kevin Parish, bringing together parishioners who own businesses, provide professional services, lead organizations, or simply want to support fellow members of our parish community.

Our mission is simple: when we support one another's businesses, we strengthen our families, our parish, and our faith community.

We believe business can be a ministry—creating opportunities to serve others, build relationships, and give back through our time, talent, and treasure.

Our Mission

Build meaningful relationships among parishioners.
Encourage members to support one another's businesses.
Create trusted referral opportunities.
Share knowledge and resources that help businesses grow.
Welcome new parishioners and provide another pathway to become involved in parish life.
Strengthen St. Kevin Parish through faith, fellowship, and service.

What We Do

Parish Link meets regularly to connect business owners, professionals, entrepreneurs, and community leaders in a welcoming, faith-centered environment.

Each meeting offers opportunities to:

Introduce your business or profession.
Exchange referrals and business opportunities.
Learn from fellow members' experiences.
Discuss current business trends and challenges.
Build lasting professional relationships rooted in Christian values.

Throughout the year, we'll also feature a Member Spotlight, giving one business the opportunity to share its story, highlight its services, and educate fellow members about its industry.

To further support our members, featured businesses will receive complimentary recognition in the parish bulletin and on the St. Kevin Parish sign along Sandy Lane.

Why It Matters

Parish Link is more than networking—it's a ministry dedicated to strengthening the people who make up our parish.

Every referral, new customer, and business connection helps parish families thrive while fostering a stronger, more connected faith community. As our members succeed, they're better able to support the parish and serve others through their gifts and generosity.

Join Us

Whether you're a business owner, entrepreneur, salesperson, nonprofit leader, skilled tradesperson, or simply want to support fellow parishioners, you're invited to join us.

Together, we can strengthen local businesses, build meaningful relationships, and help ensure that St. Kevin Parish continues to thrive for generations to come.

Parish Link meets on the Last Wednesday of the month!

My courses at the university not only had the regular registered students, but there were always auditors—in fact so many that chairs had to be brought in for almost every afternoon lecture. One afternoon just before I went into class, a distinguished, slightly graying gentleman came to me and said: "I want to talk with you; it is very important." I said: "I am about to begin my class; if you wish, you may come in and after class I will see you." I was talking on the Soviet Constitution that particular afternoon. After the lecture, he said: "I am an escaped Soviet. My father owned a circus; my brother was sent to Siberia; my sister was shot. I resolved to leave Russia, so I joined a shipping unit and one night jumped into the sea to escape. I was in danger of drowning so I prayed to Christ and was saved." He then handed me a small booklet with his name, entitled The Story of My Escape from Communism. He said: "I want you to read this carefully and then call me." He gave me his telephone number. "I know you travel around the country talking about communism. I want to travel with you. At the end of your lectures, I would like to have ten or fifteen minutes to tell the audience my firsthand experience with communism. It would be a very effective way of destroying the system which I hate."

Afterward I went to the telephone and called the head of the Communist Division of the FBI, to whom I gave the man's name. He reacted quickly: "Oh, he is a very well-known spy; we didn't know he was in the United States. The last we heard, he was in the Philippines. He's very dangerous; your life is in danger. We'll take over from this point." I never heard again from the man, and never learned what happened to him.

Because of my lectures at the university and my public appearances, my anti-Communist position was well-known. I suppose it was natural, then, for someone who defected from the party to come to see me. I met this man through a telephone call at an appointed place. He told me that he was one of the members of the presidium who sat on the stage in Madison Square Garden in New York with Earl Browder and other top Communists. He had just attended one of the top Communist meetings in New York where they not only worked together during the day, but also slept together at night.

I asked him how I could be sure that he was honest because he wished to give me material from the inside of the party. I said: "Give me your Communist card." He said: "You know you could have me killed with this card. All you would have to do is call up the Communist headquarters and read off my code number. Within a few short weeks it would be noised about that I had died in an accident." I was still unconvinced. Whenever he came to visit me, he would change taxis two or three times, and always asked to be admitted into the cellar, where he could change his clothes before coming up, because he had been at one of these night meetings of the Communists.

To make absolutely certain, I made an appointment with him at the Plaza Hotel in New York. I engaged two rooms, one adjoining the other. I called the FBI, told them I was meeting this particular man who was a top member of the Communist Party and who promised to give me information. I asked them to make a thorough investigation of his integrity. Their answer: "You hold a conversation with him; we will enter the room adjourning his, and when you leave with him, flush the toilet. That will be a signal for us to leave. We will follow him and in a month we will report to you."

In a month I received the FBI report indicating that I could trust him absolutely. He then gave me considerable information about the inside of the party, told me of false photographs that were made of me, and said that at one meeting I was called "Public Enemy No. 1." We kept in correspondence for several years until his source of information dried up, since he eventually stopped attending Communist meetings.

I angered a White Russian who accompanied me as a bodyguard throughout the country as I lectured on communism. On one occasion I was speaking in Westchester. It was the custom of the bodyguard to sit on the stage with me after being introduced as a friend; he would hand me a program on which he would mark the well-known Communists seated in the audience. In this particular hall, he handed me the program with one big "X" on it, which meant that everyone in the hall was a Communist, and I must be prepared.

So I changed the nature of my lecture, and said that I had often been accused of being unfair to the Communists because I would quote statements of theirs which might not be verifiable. I continued: "In order to correct that impression, I am going to ask various members of the audience to come to the stage and read the Communist documents." Not a single person came forward, and the rest of the lecture went on uninterrupted.

At the close of World War II, I was giving a lecture on communism in Akron, Ohio. Several lawyers sent in word to the sponsors of the lecture that they would not attend because I was unfavorable to Russia. In those days, many were well disposed toward Russia. It was a very unpopular approach to dare say anything against our so-called ally. I was staying in a rectory in Akron where a well-known prelate was also visiting.

He asked: “What are you talking about tonight?” I said: ”About Russia and Eastern Europe and how Russia will take over all of Eastern Europe, Poland, Lithuania, Albania, Czechoslovakia, etc.” The prelate said: “You’re crazy; Russia is s democracy; it is no longer Communist.” I said: “I have spent my life studying communism and I am convinced that they intend to take over Eastern Europe.” I started down the stairs. It was an old rectory and there must have been twenty-five steps. As I put my foot on each step, my friend, who stood at the top of the stairs, pointed his finger at me and at each step repeated: “Sheen, you’re wrong! You’re wrong! You’re wrong! You’re wrong!” until I reached the bottom step. I looked up at him and said: “Someday you will discover that Eastern Europe will belong to the Communists.”

The editor of a newspaper chain was in the audience that night. The next day he published a cartoon about me attacking Russia. The idea behind the cartoon was that I was destroying the unity of America and Russia.

Because of the position I took concerning Russian, my radio talks were carefully monitored. Someone stationed in the booth would shut me off the air in case I veered from the then-popular position of Russia being a democracy. I sent in a manuscript for one broadcast that contained the line, “Poland was crucified between two thieves—the Nazis and the Soviets.” I received a telegram from the Bishops’ Conference asking me not to say that, because I was implying that one of the thieves was Russia. I answered the telegram by suggesting: “How would it be to call Russia the ‘good’ thief?”

Just before World War II when Russia and Germany were still enemies, I made the prophecy on radio that as “Pilate and Herod were enemies and became friends over the bleeding Body of Christ, so one day communism and Nazism, which are now enemies, will become friends over the bleeding body of Poland.” The prophecy became true as the Nazis and Soviets were united.

Despite my opposition to the evils of communism. I have always loved Russia. The chalice I use every day in Holy Mass was used in St. Petersburg in its days of faith. It may very well be that the basic reason why communion appealed to Russia was religious. Deeply embedded in the Russian soul were passionate religious convictions: the universal vocation of Russia to call all men to brotherhood; the need of sacrifice and pain to accomplish this mission; and the supreme need of resigning oneself to God’s Will. Communism in the face of a declining Church promised the people the realization of these declining three ideals, but without clearly telling them that they would be emptied of God. Brotherhood became a revolutionary proletariat; sacrifice became violence, and the Will of God became the will of the dictator. Communism is a religion, a surrender to an absolute. That is why it appeals to those who are without faith, and why Soviet Russia is today regarded as the last hope of the Western man who lives without God.

The little tabernacle in my private chapel is a replica of a Russian church. Thus do I express my hopes for the ultimate conversion of Russia. Not in war, but in prayer must we trust that the land which once was known as Holy Russia may become again the wellspring whence a pure stream of Christianity may flow. Then shall we see fulfilled the words of the Russian poet Khomyakov, who was conscious first of Russia’s great sins:

But now, alas, what sins lie heavy,
Many and awful on thy soul!
Thou are black with black injustice,
And slavery’s yoke has branded thee,
And godless flattery and baneful lying
And sloth that’s shameful, life-denying,
And every hateful thing in thee I see.

But then he saw in his land a vessel of election summoning souls to penance:

For all that cries for consolation,
For every law that we have spurned,
For sins that stain our generation
For evil deeds our Fathers learned,
For all our country’s bitter passion,
Pay ye with tears the while we live.
O God of Might, of Thy compassion
May’st Thou forgive! May’st Thou forgive!*
